

The winding down of time

I write this to you right before 2011 begins. That which is recorded is around the corner and soon to happen. This greed based technological age of man is soon to collapse into total ruin. Why? Because the merchant princes in an ego-centric civilization have created an unsustainable living condition, for the purpose of gratifying their insatiable personal greed. At this point, their edifices are so precarious, a gust of wind is all it will take for the walls to collapse. The winds of change are blowing and soon will blow even harder. So, what form will the great collapse take and what will make it happen? Here is my understanding of the form it will take.

At the end of the age of the merchant princes, the last great era of wasteful human technology, mankind was ruled by a rich power elite who controlled the mass of corporations and governments. Everything was done for their benefit. They owned everything... from the money (that they printed and lent), to the pharmaceuticals and medicines that kept the masses alive. They had created money out of nothing and used it to "buy" the real things of tangible worth. As their fake and worthless money (that everyone used to barter goods and services) became worth less and less, and getting any of it got harder and harder for the masses of humanity, people began to lose hope. As long as this valueless paper (physical and electronic) was available in enough quantity to buy food, water, and a place to live, people had hope that things would return to the way they were when they were younger and in previous generations.

Unfortunately, things got worse and worse, regardless of what lies were bandied about in the press and on the street. Huge corporations had bought the tabulating computers and closed it down to public or government scrutiny, and fair elections became a thing of the past. The masses held on to the illusion of their democracy because the truth was too hard to believe, but leaders were promoted and selected by the merchant princes who had more money and wealth than the governments and people. Their greed and the greed of the masses of people living ego-centrally caused the great collapse. From the merchant princes at the very top, to the government politicians they owned, down to the misguided masses, they all thought that personal greed for them and their coteries and families was the best thing for everyone, especially themselves and society as a whole. The collapse happened because a society based on personal greed and the belief that the economy can expand forever was a pipe dream. It lasted for a good long while but it didn't take much to topple it. Even if the events that transpired right before the collapse hadn't happened, the society would have collapsed on its own due to finite supply and infinite demand. To which events do I refer?

- * The subversion and purchasing of the government by the merchant princes
- * The creation of "money" from nothing owned by the few to control the resources for their needs only
- * The use of the masses as work slaves to produce the goods and wealth for the upper few controlling everything
- * The masses of humanity living in giant cities where food, water, electricity and drugs needed to be continuously transported and pumped in to maintain their physical well being

- * Prisons, roads, medical care, pharmaceuticals, oil, insurance, money, water, election computers, everything "privatized" which means controlled by the few but needed by everyone, creating mass pools of wealth for the merchant princes

- * The people turning blind eyes to the false elections, subverted government, dwindling value of the fake money and standards of living, failing systems, and the aggregation of the power and wealth by the few while more and more lose their ability to even survive and make enough to sustain their families. The government of the rich makes sure that any dissenters are incarcerated in their money producing prisons or killed if they are too vocal. Who is Clint Curtis? Who is John Galt?

- * As more and more people lost all hope of ever returning to the way things were and making a living, prisons filled up, crime rose, suicides and murders increased, those who still had any jobs and wealth tried to retain it for themselves and their immediate family, exacerbating the malaise and shrinkage of the economy meant to sustain everyone, including the merchant princes.

- * Communications and electrical breakdowns causing outages during the solar maximus made many people feel dis-associated and isolated

- * When the great wave came and took out America's cost, the insurance companies could not pay out the insured loss. The private money corporation called the federal reserve tried to create more fake money to cover the loss and having their dupe government back up the "loan" to their insurance companies. The attempt failed horribly and people lost faith in the banks, fed reserve, their government, money, everything. Pandemonium ensued.

- * When water, electricity and food stopped flowing into several major cities, the great collapse had begun and the four horsemen walked the Earth again

- * When the dust settled and groups survived and rebuilt, the truth of ego-centricity and how it brought about the great collapse became common knowledge

- * Orga-centric communities adhering to the orga-centric doctrine sprang up and eventually the world was rebuilt orga-centrally. The greatest age of mankind began after the worst and greatest collapse of mankind. In time, as one, we reached the stars. We do our best, for the good of the all.
