

Separate The Wheat

What is wheat and what is chaff? Why the need to separate them? For the purposes of this forum, wheat refers to the kernels of reality that actually have weight and matter as relates to any particular issue or subject being discussed. Chaff refers to the beliefs, misconceptions, and irrelevant facts or information that don't really matter to the subject but tend to obfuscate (obstruct and confuse) the matter in discussion. Chaff may induce you to act or live your life a certain way and so have relevance for you, but not be relevant to the core facts of the situation in discussion.

Why bother separating the wheat from the chaff? Because in almost every situation, the kernels of wheat are more relevant than the chaff, and more important to address and take in to consideration when coming up with a cohesive solution to a problem. The chaff only makes the situation appear larger and muddier than it really is. Changing or dealing with the chaff rarely if ever fixes a situation unless the aggregate of all chaff (and manipulation thereof) can influence individuals with the power to change the situation. In that rare case, the chaff itself becomes a kernel and should be used as such in the actual blueprint of the situation.

How to separate the wheat from the chaff? Unfortunately, eliminating the myriad of information and details not pertinent to the issue at hand (whatever it may be) is not easy (nor equal) between individuals. A Sherlock Holmes visiting a crime scene will immediately eliminate the chaff (95% of the visible situation) and focus on just the kernels. It enables him to resolve the crime where others are lost or fail, and in the shortest time possible. In life there are those who are born with the innate ability to separate the wheat as well as those that have augmented and honed it through years of practice and effort. They can walk in to almost any situation, isolate the kernels with minimum effort, and find the best possible solution. They are the problem busters (or the go to person) that most of us are familiar with. Everybody tries to separate the wheat from the chaff but very few excel at it.

In this day and age, our society is beset with a myriad of serious problems that threaten to destroy or devastate the way of life we have all taken for granted since we were born in to it. These problems themselves are often extremely complex and with the chaff thrown in, pretty much incomprehensible and therefore irresolvable to the majority of people. Scientists, politicians, experts, etc. know their individual area of expertise fairly well but are not equipped to separate the wheat from the chaff in uncharted waters (which is what we are now in). Plain and simple, they can not fix these problems unless they stumble upon a fix by sheer luck. It won't be the BPS (best possible solution) nor the WPS, but it may be a solution. With the devastation facing this country and world, luck is not enough. This site is dedicated to separating the wheat from the chaff in the hopes that those in positions of influence may chance upon it and find solutions to their irresolvable problems. And for everyone else, I hope you enjoy this site.