

Prophecy

And so it has come to pass. That which was, is, and will be, are all eternally happening NOW. The blue print for the establishment of the creation starts from nought, builds structure imbued with spirit, all within this creations time frame. Spirits ability to perceive and guide the path of spirit/essence's evolution throughout the entirety of the creation continues, unabated. For those individual spirits that can periodically tap in to the sea of Essence and even share existence with the Prime Originator, all is NOW and the blue print is made less obscure. For this creation, there is a What, How, Why, When, and Who to understand. From mans perspective, since he is bound to such a small time frame, connecting up so one can perceive any one or all of these 5 elements, whether in the past, tiny present, or future of this small moment, is true prophecy.

Since all of creation is NOW, to utilize your spirit to tap in to the sea of Essence gives you an instant presence in whichever time frame or reference you can spiritually experience a connection with. This is across all time, not just the fleeting moment of the ill perceived present, which is already past. Then for your brain to be able to make sense of what the spirit perceived and just as difficultly, impart it to another through words. Well it is damn near impossible, but some make the attempt, and a few even succeed. The greater the individual spirits ability to connect with all of the points in time it has sparkled in physical matter, all the way back to the issuance from the Sea and connection with the Prime Originator as well as forward in time to the final return to the Sea and re-connection, the better that person/spirit can truly prophesy.

So what is prophecy. Whether it is watching the three "substances" weave together to create and fill the creation and make all and everything, or watching Space/Time grow like a crystal, with all those godzillions of triangles, or experiencing the ebb and flow of lives, society, humanity, mankind, even glimpsing the blue print and plan for final creation of it all. Prophecy is knowing what is to come and what has been, on a grander scale than just one life or lifetime. To see the entire tapestry, from its beginning to its completion, and the thread that is your spirit, as it passes throughout the whole thing. When you can allow your spirit to experience it's whole journey, in all the Matter/Energy and Space/Time frames it occupied all the way to the completed end, then you can truly prophesy. For then you are spiritually self aware, and can sparkle backwards and forwards to all the other times you have and will be so. In doing so, yes you get to experience (see) the splendor and glory of the tapestry but even more importantly, you become like a conduit for the entire Sea of Essence to take part in your portion of the creation and if necessary, the Prime Originator. It would have to be pretty dire indeed for the PO to do such and utilize it, but it has happened. Anyway, the force of life (Essence) is strong enough, beyond words.

The enlightened man says, I see nothing, and in so doing, he perceives everything. The seer says, I see everywhen, but I can tell you only a little from when I saw it. Thus prophecy is from the eye of the beholder. True prophecy is dependent in how good the seer is at connecting with themselves in long time and their ability to perceive and understand what they witness in that "future" moment of their existence, and then explain it in the past of "the present" moment they are sharing with others on the Mag3 level. No wonder there are such few prophets of truth. To those stuck in the moment, anything beyond that level of awareness is something they don't perceive nor tend to accept, even if it is true. Many humans deny any ability that they can not perceive in themselves. Thus prophecy often goes unnoticed by those who don't wish to see it. There is none so blind as he/she who does not wish to see.

T&F